Business environment

Economic sentiment indicator

GDP (constant prices, % year-on year)

Inflation (% , year-on-year)

Unemployment rate (%)

In the first half of 2025, the global economic environment was defined by heightened uncertainty stemming from shifting trade policies and tariff developments, particularly between the US and its global partners. Despite this volatility, the Baltic economies have shown resilience, supported by growing manufacturing output, improving consumer sentiment.

Lithuania continues to lead regional growth; the economy is benefiting from robust household consumption, strong manufacturing activity, and early signs of recovery in the real estate sector. Latvia's economy, while still recovering from a period of contraction, is showing encouraging signs of stabilization, with retail activity, manufacturing output, and sentiment indicators all trending positively. Estonia, though experiencing a more uneven recovery, has seen cyclical sectors contribute positively to growth, even as consumer confidence and sentiment in services remain subdued due to tax policy changes.

Across the region, household purchasing power is improving as real wages outpace inflation and labour markets remain relatively tight. Additionally, lower interest rates are also beginning to filter through to the real economy, supporting consumer demand and business investments. While risks remain, particularly related to geopolitical developments and global trade tensions, the underlying fundamentals of the Baltic economies appear to be strengthening.

As a leading financial institution in the region, we remain committed to supporting our clients through this evolving macroeconomic landscape. We continue to offer financing solutions tailored to both households and businesses, enabling investment, innovation, and growth. We are confident in the region's ability to adapt and thrive in a complex global environment.
